Ars Poetica --Archibald MacLeish

A poem should be palpable and mute

As a globed fruit,

Dumb

As old medallions to the thumb,

Silent as the sleeve-worn stone

Of casement ledges where the moss has grown--

A poem should be wordless

As the flight of birds.

A poem should be motionless in time
As the moon climbs,
Leaving, as the moon releases Twig by twig the night-entangled trees, Leaving, as the moon behind the winter leaves, Memory by memory the mind--
A poem should be motionless in time
As the moon climbs.

A poem should be equal to:
Not true.
For all the history of grief
An empty doorway and a maple leaf.
For love
The leaning grasses and two lights above the sea--
A poem should not mean But be.

This Is Just To Say - William Carlos Williams

I have eaten the plums that were in the icebox and which you were probably saving for breakfast

Forgive me they were delicious so sweet and so cold

The Red Wheelbarrow  - William Carlos Williams

So much depends upon a red wheel barrow glazed with rain water beside the white chickens

So here I am, in the middle way, having had twenty years--

Twenty years largely wasted, the years of l'entre deux guerres

Trying to use words, and every attempt

Is a wholly new start, and a different kind of failure

Because one has only learnt to get the better of words

For the thing one no longer has to say, or the way in which

One is no longer disposed to say it. And so each venture

Is a new beginning, a raid on the inarticulate

With shabby equipment always deteriorating

In the general mess of imprecision of feeling,

Undisciplined squads of emotion. And what there is to conquer

By strength and submission, has already been discovered

Once or twice, or several times, by men whom one cannot hope

To emulate--but there is no competition--

There is only the fight to recover what has been lost

And found and lost again and again: and now, under conditions

That seem unpropitious. But perhaps neither gain nor loss.

For us, there is only the trying. The rest is not our business.

Home is where one starts from. As we grow older
The world becomes stranger, the pattern more complicated

Of dead and living. Not the intense moment

Isolated, with no before and after,

But a lifetime burning in every moment

And not the lifetime of one man only

But of old stones that cannot be deciphered.

There is a time for the evening under starlight,

A time for the evening under lamplight

(The evening with the photograph album).

Love is most nearly itself

When here and now cease to matter.

Old men ought to be explorers

Here or there does not matter

We must be still and still moving

Into another intensity

For a further union, a deeper communion

Through the dark cold and the empty desolation,

The wave cry, the wind cry, the vast waters

Of the petrel and the porpoise. In my end is my beginning.

Little Gidding

What we call the beginning is often the end
And to make and end is to make a beginning.
The end is where we start from. And every phrase And sentence that is right (where every word is at home, Taking its place to support the others,
The word neither diffident nor ostentatious, An easy commerce of the old and the new,
The common word exact without vulgarity,
The formal word precise but not pedantic, The complete consort dancing together)
Every phrase and every sentence is an end and a beginning, Every poem an epitaph. And any action
Is a step to the block, to the fire, down the sea's throat
Or to an illegible stone: and that is where we start.
We die with the dying:
See, they depart, and we go with them.
We are born with the dead:
See, they return, and bring us with them.
The moment of the rose and the moment of the yew-tree Are of equal duration. A people without history Is not redeemed from time, for history is a pattern Of timeless moments. So, while the light fails On a winter's afternoon, in a secluded chapel History is now and England.

With the drawing of this Love and the voice of this

   Calling

We shall not cease from exploration
And the end of all our exploring Will be to arrive where we started And know the place for the first time.

Through the unknown, unremembered gate
When the last of earth left to discover Is that which was the beginning;

At the source of the longest river
The voice of the hidden waterfall
And the children in the apple-tree

Not known, because not looked for But heard, half-heard, in the stillness

Between two waves of the sea.

Quick now, here, now, always--

A condition of complete simplicity

(Costing not less than everything)

And all shall be well and

All manner of thing shall be well

When the tongues of flame are in-folded

Into the crowned knot of fire And the fire and the rose are one.

Pink Moon ❄️ The Pond

-- Mary Oliver

You think it will never happen again

Then, one night in April the tribes wake trilling.

You walk down to the shore.

Your coming stills them, but little by little the silence lifts until song is everywhere and your soul rises from your bones and strides out over the water.

It is a crazy thing to do - for no one can live like that, floating around in the darkness over the gauzy water.

Left on the shore your bones keep shouting come back!

But your soul won't listen; in the distance it is unfolding like a pair of wings, it is sparking like hot wires. So, like a good friend,

you decide to follow.
You step off the shore and plummet to your knees - you slog forward to your thighs and sink to your cheekbones - and now you are caught by the cold chains of the water - you are vanishing while around you the frogs continue to sing, driving their music upward through your own throat, not even noticing you are something else.
And that's when it happens - you see everything through their eyes, their joy, their necessity;
you wear their webbed fingers;
your throat swells.
And that's when you know you will live whether you will or not, one way or another, one long muscle.

It's no more mysterious than that.

So you relax, you don't fight it anymore,

The darkness coming down called water,

called spring,

called the green leaf, called a woman's body as it turns into mud and leaves, as it beats in its cage of water, as it turns like a lonely spindle in the moonlight, as it says yes

Such Singing in the Wild Branches  -- Mary Oliver

It was spring and finally I heard him among the first leaves - then I saw him clutching the limb in an island of shade with his red-brown feathers all trim and neat for the new year.

First, I stood still and thought of nothing.

Then I began to listen.

Then I was filled with gladness - and that's when it happened, when I seemed to float, to be, myself, a wing or a tree - and I began to understand what the bird was saying, and the sands in the glass stopped for a pure white moment while gravity sprinkled upward like rain, rising, and in fact it became difficult to tell just what it was that was singing - it was the thrush for sure, but it seemed not a single thrush, but himself, and all his brothers, and also the trees around them, as well as the gliding, long-tailed clouds in the perfectly blue sky - all, all of them were singing.
And, of course, yes, so it seemed,
so was I.
Such soft and solemn and perfect music doesn't last for more than a few moments.
It's one of those magical places wise people like to talk about.
One of the things they say about it, that is true, is that, once you've been there, you're there forever.
Listen, everyone has a chance.
Is it spring, is it morning?
Are there trees near you, and does your own soul need comforting?
Quick, then - open the door and fly on your heavy feet; the song may already be drifting away.

ST KEVIN AND THE BLACKBIRD

And then there was St Kevin and the blackbird.
The saint is kneeling, arms stretched out, inside His cell, but the cell is narrow, so One turned-up palm is out the window, stiff As a crossbeam, when a blackbird lands And lays in it and settles down to nest.
Kevin feels the warm eggs, the small breast, the tucked Neat head and claws and, finding himself linked Into the network of eternal life,
Is moved to pity: now he must hold his hand
Like a branch out in the sun and rain for weeks Until the young are hatched and fledged and flown.

And since the whole thing's imagined anyhow, Imagine being Kevin. Which is he?
Self-forgetful or in agony all the time
From the neck on out down through his hurting forearms?
Are his fingers sleeping? Does he still feel his knees?
Or has the shut-eyed blank of underearth Crept up through him? Is there distance in his head?
Alone and mirrored clear in love's deep river,
'To labour and not to seek reward,' he prays,
A prayer his body makes entirely For he has forgotten self, forgotten bird
And on the riverbank forgotten the river's name.
